As a leading provider of engineering staffing and outsourcing solutions, Kelly Services awards two scholarships annually to encourage student interest in engineering and to build awareness of engineering as a career path with unlimited potential.

“Exceling within a challenging university engineering program requires diligence and commitment, traits that will go on to serve as building blocks to a successful career in engineering,” said Byrne Luft, country manager, Kelly Services Canada. “As a global provider of workforce solutions to the engineering industry, Kelly is dedicated to promoting achievement for engineering students. David is a very accomplished student and shared an excellent understanding and interpretation of design thinking in his scholarship application process; he is a deserving winner and is certain to have a very bright future.”

“After receiving my engineering degree I want to focus on statistical data analysis related to process improvement, with a concentration on worker safety and ergonomics to improve productivity,” said David De Sa. “I am very grateful to receive this support from Kelly Services and I look forward to continuing my education.”

To be considered, applicants must be full-time students pursuing a degree at an accredited institution of higher education in the United States or Canada and be accepted into the School of Engineering. Students must have a minimum of a 3.0 cumulative grade point average (GPA) on a 4.0 scale.

In addition to having an outstanding academic performance, candidates are required to write an essay that is judged based on depth of knowledge and awareness of the issue and/or challenge addressed, as well as creativity, composition and originality.

EDITOR’S NOTE: David De Sa is originally from Toronto and currently attends Ryerson University, also in Toronto.
